

Following the Star

Every Christmas I picture the three wise men as they traveled through the desert in pursuit of that mysterious star. I can visualize them crossing the hot, sandy deserts by day and camping at night. I can see them sitting before their tents and looking in wonder at the heavens. That new star had not been there before. It must have amazed them.

They had heard about the coming of the Messiah. They had studied about it in the ancient books, but now they read it in the stars.

“For this cause we were born. We must follow.”

And so they journeyed by faith and it finally led them to the humble manger with the newborn Child.

They fell down in worship and whispered, "It's the King of Kings."

Let's follow that star of light in our hearts, not to an earthly stable, but to the One who is with us everywhere. Let's kneel before our wonderful Savior, bringing what He desires most—our time, honor, attention, and love.

Let's make Him proud by celebrating not just His birth in the present, but our lives with Him forever.
